NOTICE

The Wainwright Tennis Club are holding their annual meeting in the Town Hall to-night (Wednesday) at 8 p.m. All those interested are invited to attend.

Much Enjoyment at "Hard Times" Party

"Blessed are the fun makers, for they shall inherit the earth!" is a based headline but one very fitting to those who attended the party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. McBride on Thursday evening last.

The evening's enjoyment started with a delicious dinner followed by numerous games and contests, appropriate to the occasion. The costumes in which the guests arrived will long be remembered by those present. Such a gathering of hard-up and comical-looking specimens never before was seen and all were loud in their praises for the originality of the display.

The party dispersed at a late hour with all very enthusiastic over the enjoyable evening shown them by their host and hostess.

Sunday last saw a few townspeople on the tennis courts, brushing up on this sport.

Infant Child Passes At Hosp.

Albert Walter, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Harris of Wainwright, passed away in the local hospital on Sunday evening last, at the age of 11 days.

The wee mite was buried in the Wainwright cemetery on Tuesday afternoon, McLeod's Funeral Parlors being in charge.

Farewell Party For Mr. & Mrs. Agnew

A delightful evening of dancing was held in the Masonic Hall on Monday last, the occasion being a party sponsored by the curiers and their friends in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Agnew, who are leaving this week for their new home at Vancouver, where Mr. Agnew intends to enter business.

The evening's festivities consisted of both Old-Time and modern dancing. A prize spot dance was held, Miss M. Williams and Mr. W. Loudfoot being the happy winners after elimination.

Sharp at midnight, the ladies served a delightful lunch, after which, Mr. Jack Teaford, who acted in the capacity of Master of Ceremonies, introduced the president of the club, Mr. W. Stuart. In a few well chosen words of praise for the departing couple, he presented them with a small token as a tangible remembrance of their association with the Wainwright curiers.

Mr. Agnew thanked all those present and on behalf of his wife for their kind thoughts and good wishes and assured all that the years could never erase the memories of Wainwright and their friends from their hearts.

Dancing continued until about two a.m. when the party broke up with well-wishes and farewells for this popular couple.

The music for dancing was supplied by Messrs. J. Springstead, A. Adams, H. Leroux and C. Wittmann.

Mont.-Alta. Shows Fine Possibilities

According to reports at hand, tests at the Mont.-Alta. area, proving most satisfactory to those interested. Highest grade of crude oil yet struck in this field is shown. Preparations for complete tests are expected to be finished early this week.

Slight trouble with the "packer" which was used to shut off the water at higher levels has caused the final tests to be delayed, but as soon as this difficulty can be adjusted, full production tests can be made.

If there is sufficient gas pressure in the lower horizon, this well may prove to be the most productive.

Otherwise it will have to be pumped. The first deep test well in the Wainwright field, the Montreal-Alberta is drilled to a depth of 3,410 feet and oil was struck after the limestone was penetrated to a depth of 1,200 feet.

It is reported that there is already 1,000 feet of oil of high gravity showing in this well.

"The Sea-Spoilers" Portrayed on Screen

Outdoor adventure in a new setting will provide good entertainment for all who like their film fare packed with action and thrills.

Spanking out sea-pooling in Alaska is the theme and John Wayne is a heroic figure as a young Coast Guard officer assigned to "get his man"—in this case the head of a smuggling ring.

The evil-doers also kidnap the young man's sweetheart but he and his faithful pal take a small boat and scour the Alaskan waters until they locate the gang's hideout. Here they are trapped and thrown into a collar but by sending a fake radio message, using the code calls for help, Wayne summons the patrol boat and the smugglers are captured after a fierce battle.

William Bakewell is believable in the role of a frightened young officer and Nan Grey contributes the romantic touch.

"The Sea-Spoilers" is showing at the local playhouse on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

Aged Resident of Irma Passes

Passing away peacefully at the home of Mr. E. Elford, Mrs. Alice Louise Wier, resident of Irma for the past six years, was laid to rest today (Wednesday).

The deceased was born at Picton, Ont., and spent the last thirty years of her life in Alberta, where she always took an active part in the life of the community in which she resided. She was in her 90th year when she passed away.

The funeral was held from the home of Mr. Elford, Rev. E. F. Kemp of Irma United church conducting the ceremony. Interment was made in the Irma cemetery, with McLeod's Funeral Parlors of Wainwright in charge of arrangements.

Quite a number of the farmers of the district started work on the land during the past week. We understand that some have already seeded their grain.

Coronation Meet Sees Only Fair Attendance

Only a small crowd gathered in the Town Hall on Thursday evening last at a meeting called to decide what form of celebration the Wainwright citizens desire to hold to commemorate the coronation of their gracious majesty King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

With his worship the Mayor in the chair the meeting was called to order and after a great deal of discussion, it was decided to ask the town to set aside a plot of ground, (preferably the first block west of Main street on Fourth avenue) as a park, and also to ask citizens to form groups in each block to plant trees along the streets in front of their homes, these to be supplied and cared for by the citizens themselves.

The form of programme for the day's activities was drawn up and it was decided to start with a parade by the school children and short addresses followed by an open air gathering to hear the broadcast of the coronation direct from London; the afternoon to be spent in sports, tree planting or a commencement of work on the park site.

It was suggested that the citizens be asked to subscribe to a fund for the purpose of purchasing medals for the kiddies and decorations for the streets.

The sore spot of the evening, however, seemed to be the Council's attitude toward this celebration; they offering to donate only the small sum of $25.00. However, a committee of five was chosen to interview the Council members at their next regular meeting to try to persuade them to increase their donation to several hundred dollars, thus enabling Wainwright to put on a celebration fitting to a town of this size.

A committee was appointed to arrange the necessary details of this function and to form sub-committees to carry on and arrange for the various activities of the day. Those chosen were as follows: His Worship Mayor Middleman, Reverends Armstrong, Brooker, Hickey, Bateman and Bennett, Miss O. Wheeler, and Messrs. J. Stinet, O. Murray, G. Graham, C. Horn, J. Fuller, A. Glenn and H. Smart.

LOCAL NOTES

The ladies of St. James' Episcopal church are announcing a monster supper and dance in the school auditorium on April 24th. Everyone is invited to attend.

Mr. W. J. Lissimore is a patient in the hospital this week. We extend wishes for his speedy recovery to health.

Representing the Battleview Oils Ltd., Mr. L. P. Evans of Toronto is spending some time in this district looking after the companies interests.

Mr. James Moffatt of Vancouver, is here on a short visit with his brothers, Bob and William.

Mary Pickford "One Rainy Afternoon"

Mary Pickford and Jesse Lasky, who certainly know what theatre-goers need for entertainment, have whipped together in this, their first picture, an attraction potentially pleasing to all.

"One Rainy Afternoon" which shows at the Elite theatre Thurs., Fri. and Sat. of this week, is a farcical and romantic comedy.

That playing story is cleverly blended with plenty to hold interest and action, situations and dialogue. It presents a star, Francis Lederer, who won quite a bit of popularity via his work in "Pursuit of Happiness" and "The Gay Deception."

It supports him with a surprisingly effective Ida Lupino and lines up five comedians to give the picture verve and sparkle that keyed the audience to a high pitch of appreciative enthusiasm.

As it goes, tempered to a lively key, actor Philippe and Yvonne are carrying on a romantic flirtation. They usually meet in a "darkened movie show." One rainy afternoon they are separated and under the spell of the picture's romance, Philippe, by mistake, kisses Monique. The excitement is great and funny as the Purity League president busts in and demands Philippe's arrest. He is sentenced, but in the end Monique, who has become more than mildly interested in the romantic monster pays his fine.

The story is gay and merry. Well conceived and directed, it permits exceptional individual performances that truly embellish the motivating character. While the plot is simple, and it carries through continually, plenty of unique substantiating detail has been inserted to permit the individual players to score with their respective talents.

Committees Chosen For Coronation Day

The committee chosen at the public meeting on Thursday last to make arrangements for the Coronation celebration, met in the Town Hall on Monday last. Sub-committees were chosen to look after the various activities of the day and a certain amount of plans were drawn up regarding the day's programme. However, this appears to be at a standstill until committee interviews the Town Council, which they intend to do on Thursday evening of this week, when they hope to receive a larger donation from the Town or find some way of raising sufficient funds to put this affair over as it should be.

Hon. S. Low Says Scrip Be Redeemed

The provincial government has abandoned its prosperity certificate plan.

Announcement to this effect was made by Hon. Soion Low, provincial treasurer, last week. Only about $12,000 worth of scrip is outstanding at present.

The department will redeem this scrip as it comes in, but no certificates will be re-issued by the government. Decision to abandon the plan was reached when it became apparent that circulation of the scrip almost completely stopped.

"It had nothing to do with social credit anyway," one of the private members remarked when the decision of the provincial treasurer became known.

The scheme was launched in September, 1936, by the government as a means of financing road work in rural constituencies.

About $500,000 worth of certificates were printed in Calgary. Of this amount, only $262,000 worth was actually issued.

In an effort to keep the plan in operation, individual members of the cabinet announced they were prepared to accept a portion of their salaries in scrip.

They then failed to go through with their part of the bargain.

In a last desperate effort to keep the plan alive, civil servants were "invited" to "purchase" small quantities of scrip every day.

It is believed that all certificates will be withdrawn from circulation within the next few weeks.

The Isle of Man, like Ireland, has no roads or snakes.

LOCAL NOTES

Mr. Percy Smale was a tripper to Vancouver for a short stay. He reports a wonderful holiday at this coastal point.

Mrs. A. Dupre, who has been spending the winter in Vancouver, returned home at the week-end.

Mr. T. Belling and family left for their new home in Ontario on Thursday morning last. Mrs. Belling followed on Monday's train.

Don't miss the Box Social and dance which the members of the A.Y.P.A. are sponsoring on Friday of this week.

Mrs. J. Tolsie, accompanied by her daughter Margaret, are away to visit friends and relatives in Ontario.

We are sorry to report the illness of Mrs. E. Genderson, who is confined to her home. During the lady's absence, Mrs. F. Stevens is in charge of the store.

Mr. Stan Burkholder was a tripper to Edmonton over the week-end and we understand that he has purchased a new truck to care for his increased business.

Mr. D. W. Davison left by motor for Edmonton on Saturday, to bring Mrs. Davison, who has been visiting friends in that city, back.

Mr. E. Frickleton accompanied by his daughter, spent a few days in Edmonton last week on business.

No Price-Gouging Says Oil Firms

Hardly less an old wives tale than the "monopoly" charges so frequently made, is the oft repeated charge that the oil business is gouging or planning to gouge the public for prices of its products.

The best evidence that there never has been justification for this charge is the fact that in spite of many years of being "investigated," the industry is still doing its business with prices of its products lower than ever.

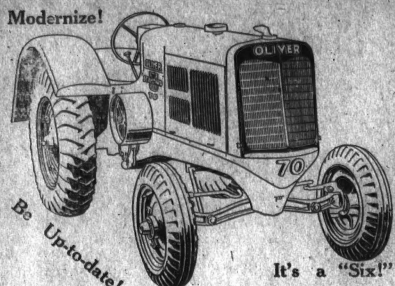

Prices have fluctuated with changing conditions of supply and demand and general economic prosperity. At times there have been good profits earned. In recent times with a good many of the established companies they have been too low to provide anything like a reasonable return, on capital and for service rendered. One of the largest earned only 3.1 per cent in 1935 and part of that came from money invested, not from prices charged for products.

An 1899 sales ticket shows that the then almost useless by-product gasoline was selling at approximately the same price that is obtained for the highly developed and efficient product of today. Today's price is only half that of the inferior gasoline that was sold in 1919.

This at least effectively answers the charge of price-gouging.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Cowley are now in residence in their home on Sixth avenue, the house formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. C. McGill.

Modernize!

Here it is—a 6-cylinder tractor—very modern, model 70 Oliver Hart Parr Tractor. Real economy, for any type of fuel. The 70-H.P. for gasoline; 70-K.D. for kerosene or distillate. We use a different type of manifold and engine head for different fuels. This assures most efficient operation for each fuel at lowest cost. Hart Parr tractors still hold their old slogan, "More power, Lowest cost, Longest Life."

Self-Starter, Electric Lights, Extra Equipment. A new "70" will be here shortly, and we invite you to inspect this Tractor at any time. Demonstrations made for Spring work at your convenience.

Ideas Get the Jobs

(Condensed from Review of Reviews by John R. Tunde)

There's a true story. There were 70 applicants for the job of salesman for an oil burner corporation. One of the applicants, the usual letter writing to his age and experience was just as good as the others in the file. So instead of attempting to sell himself, he sold ideas.

First, he carefully studied the company's product. After learning all he could he visited three friends who had installed the burner. Did they like it? Why not? Then he questioned six more friends who had used burners. After that he went to five people who still used coal. The results of his investigation he put into a report which stated that he had made the study to satisfy himself that the corporation's burner was the best, and that he could not enthusiastically recommend it. This report was passed around to every officer in the concern who unanimously voted to hire him.

One man out of 70. Among all these applicants he was the only one who had used his imagination in seeking the job!

Said the personnel manager of one of New York's largest department stores to me the other day: "Not one person in a hundred who comes before my desk has any ideas. Yet it's the girl with ideas who gets the job, the girl who has intelligence and interest enough to spend some time in the store looking around before she comes to me, who can suggest ways we may improve our service, who at least will be able to say: 'I watched the client and customers in the jewelry department yesterday and believe I could sell in that line. Most of them don't even do that.'"

But here is how one girl from the Middle West approached a New York department store. She had majored in art so she studied the art section of all the rivals of the company. Then she wrote a letter of application in which she set forth some of the best ideas she had observed elsewhere. She got the job.

Your idea must be pertinent to the particular job you want. It should be specific and practical. Yet, even if your idea is valuable, you will nevertheless stand out above the crowd as that oil-burner salesman did. "Anyone with ideas," said the personnel director of one New York bank, "is a refreshing and potentially successful person."

"Ideas!" snorted the president of a publishing house when I brought up the idea. "Why must job hunters do even know what the publishing business is. They all want to become editors; they aren't even aware of the existence of our other departments."

When searching for ideas, first of all study the business that interests you. Read up on it, learn its problems. Then study particularly the concern with which you would like to be associated, and its competitors. Talk to their salesmen. Don't go near the firm until you know something about the business, and can demonstrate that you are the person who can be useful to it in some way. Getting a job is an examination in ideas, and you cannot afford to fail.

Especially valuable in your search for ideas are the various trade journals usually more than one in each branch of industry. References will show books from which you can obtain information that, possibly even the man who is hiring you doesn't know. In any case, he will be astonished when he finds an applicant for a job who has some comprehension of what he is to do.

All around us there are businesses in which jobs are being done according to traditional methods. Try to imagine different ways of doing them. A woman went to an ocean steamship line with the idea of installing women in the dining saloons on their boats instead of stewards. The idea had never before been tried. The company scoffed, but she persisted until finally she was allowed to try her plan out on one vessel. It was a success that today every ship of the fleet is staffed by women—and the one who had the idea now occupies an executive position in the company.

"What would you do if you had to land a job tomorrow?" I asked the personnel manager of a great public service corporation. "Well," he said, "I'd investigate the cotton textile business. Down street is a promenade of cotton brokers who produce a specially fine grade of muslin cloth that I've found extremely good for wiping my eyeglasses. Trouble is I have to buy the cloth in quantities and not in it up myself. All right, I'd work out an idea for selling this madras in small squares just for that purpose. I'd show how the idea could be sold and publicized and if I walked into their office I believe I'd land a job!"

I think, he would. Anyone who can show a man how to improve his business is going to be listened to with respect and attention, whether or not anything comes from the idea in the end. And right now, when business isn't too good, employers are more than usually receptive to suggestions. Remember one thing: An employer is not interested in you. His function is not to give out jobs, but to make money. Tell him how to do that and you'll land the job.

Here's another important point. When you land a job don't assume you should stop dealing in ideas. On the contrary, it's just as necessary to concentrate upon ideas after you have a job as it is for the graduate to keep educating himself after he leaves college. The employee with ideas stands out over the rest of the force just as he did among the applicants for the position.

Often the simplest ideas are the best. A clerk in a chain store where the coffee sales were falling away went to the manager with an idea which was ridiculed. But it persisted, and the next Monday morning he and his helpers all wore small bows of red ribbon on the second finger of their right hand. "Why is that red ribbon tied to your finger?" customers asked. "Oh, I nearly forgot. This is to remind me to tell you that we have a very special sale of coffee this week." Instead of the usual 500 pounds the store had sold 1500 by Saturday night.

The man with ideas is rarely out of a job. A young graduate, I know, who worked his way through college washing dishes, tramped the streets of Manhattan in vain for three months looking for a job. Finally one day I asked him what he knew best of all. "Dishwashing," he replied sarcastically.

TODAY & TOMORROW

PROPHET of surplus people

In the year 1793 a young man of 22, named Robert Thomas Malthus, wrote a little book, which has influenced political economy for nearly 40 years. His "Essay on Population" pointed out that the human race was increasing faster than the means of subsistence.

What Malthus tried to tell the world was that its economic salvation depended upon a more rational and intelligent organization of society, to increase the production of the necessities of life and work out a better system of distribution, to make more available to everybody.

In Malthus' day disease and disease killed off more people than war. They still do in many countries, but the civilized world of today has abolished famine and made great headway toward abolishing disease. Thus the means of subsistence in many countries, and nations still go to war in the hope of getting more food for their surplus people. If war kills off enough to reduce the surplus the result may be the same as if new territories had been conquered.

Most people do not like to face uncomfortable facts. They prefer to believe in pleasant things. Most of us live in a dream world, regarding what we wish were true as being the truth. Malthus brought down upon himself a storm of criticism from sentimentalists who refused to believe that humanity must forever face a struggle for existence.

Folk who preach that there is some easy way of life for everybody can always get a hearing, for people want to believe that. Jean Jacques Rousseau preached that doctrine to the French people 150 years ago. The Revolution was going to end poverty and distress. Instead, it plunged France and most of the rest of the world into chaos and despair. Only sentimentalists believe that mankind can lift itself by its bootstraps into a life of universal comfort and ease. All that society can do, in the long run, is to see that nobody is deprived by others of his opportunity for hard work, or of the just reward of his individual efforts.

PROOFS Malthus, real prophet. Proof that Malthus was a real prophet is visible all over the world today. Japan occupies Manchuria, Italy seizes Ethiopia, both overpopulated nations seeking more room and more food for their surplus people. Germany threatens another war to insure that its increasing people shall not starve. Malthus' own little England was foresighted enough to grab off and hang on to great colonial areas which will feed its increasing population for a long time to come. France has kept itself out of the race for more land by keeping its population at a stationary level for generations.

Our own America can still feed all our present inhabitants and to spare. We bought from France and took from Mexico everything from the Mississippi to the Pacific, and invited the whole world to make itself at home. They came, and our

"All right, got an idea about dishwashing and go out and grab off a job."

That's exactly what he did. "In those days of drudgery in the college commons he had evolved a strange way of taking some of the inefficiency out of soap suds and dish pans. The big hotels and restaurants had electric washing machines and wouldn't listen. He persisted, ending up in a cheap Greek restaurant downtown which was doing a rushing business at noon with stacks of dirty dishes piling up in the kitchen. "I think I can save you money," he told the fat Greek who owned the cafe. The boss was uninterested, and let the boy put his idea into practice.

Gradually the boy changed things around in the kitchen, then he went to work in the dining room, cleaning the place up until the little hole-in-the-wall began to attract a better class of trade. Today, a year later, the restaurant is efficiently run and making money. The young man is now suggesting ideas any more now he is trying them out without permission. He is one of the partners.

Personality is and always will be a factor in getting a job. But today employers are asking for something more than personality. They're asking you what ideas you are working on, what sort of a survey you have made of their business and its problems. In practically every line of work there are jobs, and too few persons to fill them. Too few, that is, of the right sort. Every employer will tell you that he has long lists of applicants who will never be considered, because their applications show no sense of the importance of ideas.

Do you want to get a job? First go out and get an idea.

food resources are still ample but we've had to withdraw our standing invitation and are beginning to wonder how long we can continue to feed ourselves. For our birthrate is still higher than our death rate.

As I read history, it has been mainly a ceaseless migration of peoples in search of food, with the stronger killing the weak who stand between them and a better food supply.

SCIENCE makes life easier. Science has done much to make the struggle for life easier, since Malthus wrote. We have learned how to produce more food with less labor, and how to create other forms of wealth which are readily exchanged for food.

At the same time medical science has stimulated the growth of population and the demand for food, by keeping more babies alive and eliminating epidemic diseases. Offsetting that to some extent are the achievements of engineering and chemical science which insure that modern wars over food will kill many times more people, and so reduce the surplus population faster than primitive warfare could do.

Some Oriental peoples solve their food problem by drowning babies, especially girls, and savage tribes in Africa and the South Seas still continue the practice of killing the old folks who can no longer feed for themselves. We are revolted by such practices, but our own ancestors, only three or four generations ago, had to survive or perish by the rule that only the hardest had a chance. If they survived the slow voyage in sailing ships, and Indians, malaria, yellow-jack or northern winters didn't pick them off, they lived to become good Americans.

Designed in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39 inch material for the dress and 1 1/2 yards for the bolero. In monochrome the ensemble requires 4 1/2 yards.

CHARMING BOLEO FROCK

Pattern 8851: Here's something right down your alley if you crave new and fetching styles for yourself. The bolero is front-page stuff where smart fashions are cultivated, so be wise and boleroize this Spring!

This Sew-Your-Own is easy to have; and if you would double its utility make two versions of the jacket: silk print in one of the new back-to-nature designs will be chic for dressy afternoons, and a rich monochrome to match the dress will stand up in good stead for dinner and after. A softly draped girdle that ties at the side adds unusual smartness. You'll wear the ensemble as is—you'll wear the dress alone, but one way or another you'll wear and wear and wear this grand number.

For Pattern, send 15 cents in coin (for each pattern desired) your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE to Patricia Dow, (Wainwright Star) Pattern Dept., 115 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Household Hint: Tin bread boxes or cookie jars, after washing with soap and water, should be well rinsed with a baking soda solution (two tablespoons of soda to one quart of water). Rinse in clean water and place in the sun to air. Such food containers are likely to become musty if not kept scrupulously clean, but the treatment recommended will keep them free of odor.

PLANTS REQUIRE LIQUEUR STRONG

The growing plant, in a living being which links man to the soil, says B. Leslie Emalie in the current issue of his "Farm News Letter", and the surface soil itself is alive with myriads of microscopic creatures—bacteria, protozoa, moulds, etc. Man is of the earth and derives his nurture from the soil through the medium of the plant products he consumes and also less directly by preying upon quadrupeds and birds to gratify his taste for flesh. When the world was young and torrid, life as we know it could have existed thereon, and how the first plants grew is a mystery as profound as that which veils the origin of the animal kingdom. As far as we know the wild goose chase for the "missing link" is proceeding; but let's get down to earth.

Soil Formation

Soils partake of the nature of the rocks from which they have been formed by age-long processes of weathering and chemical decomposition. Secondary soils are those formed in their present location, on plateaus or moderate slopes. Alluvial soils, found in valleys and deltas, are the accumulation of debris washed down from the hillsides or carried and deposited by streams. Other transported soils owe their origin and position to glacial action. Most of these "mineral" soils contain from two to three per cent of humus which, though imperfectly understood, is usually referred to as decomposed organic or vegetable matter. There are also the peat and muck soils formed in swamps through the successive growth and decay of plants, muck being peat in a more advanced stage of decomposition. The more prevalent mineral soils contain varying proportions of clay and sand. When clay predominates the soil is heavy, and if sand is the chief constituent the soil is light. Actually, by volume, sand weighs more than clay, but the terms refer to the relative ease with which the soil may be worked. Mucks differ widely from mineral soils in that the former consists largely of vegetable matter with but little mineral substance. They are high in total nitrogen but low in phosphate and Food Needs.

Considering that the upper six-inch layer of a medium loam soil weighs about two million pounds per acre, one realizes that the relatively small amounts of plant food substances supplied by the soil are of a 2-12-6 fertilizer could scarcely be detected in a chemical analysis of the soil. Yet these minute amounts of plant food will exert a distinct influence on crop growth, because they are furnished in a more assimilable form and in quantity sufficient for the plants' meagre needs at the outset. Plants consist largely of water, and the carbon which represents half their dry matter they abstract from the atmosphere. They take the nitrogen, however, from the soil in liquid form and like it strong.

MOISTURE IN THE INCUBATOR

The warmer the air the greater the moisture carrying capacity. Hence the air in the incubator must carry more moisture than the air in the room to register the same relative humidity. If moisture is not present in sufficient quantities the eggs dry very rapidly and may cause chicks to die in the shell as the outer membrane of the egg becomes so dry and tough that the chick cannot break it.

Most incubators are manufactured for use in districts where moisture content of the air is higher than on the Canadian prairies. The humidity in the incubator should be from 50 to 60 per cent which may be ascertained by use of a hygrometer for sale wherever incubator thermometers and supplies are sold. Reasonable humidity maintained in the incubator room is essential in regulating the moisture in the incubator.

Actual tests have shown marked improvement in hatchings when extra moisture has been introduced into the average incubator. Sand trays or any provision for moisture made by the manufacturer of the incubator should be used and if the humidity cannot be maintained at 50 or 60 per cent, extra provision should be made. Such methods as sprinkling of eggs and increasing moisture in sand trays have frequently proven inadequate for prairie conditions.

At the Dominion Experimental Station at Scott, Sask., moisture pads are made by wrapping cloth or burlap around a piece of a shingle or thin board and binding tightly with wire. These pads vary in size from one inch thick, two inches wide and four inches long, to nearly twice the size and are suspended by a wire a few inches below the floor plate in the top of the incubator. The number of pads used and the frequency of dipping them in water depends upon the size of incubator and ventilation provided. The humidity should range between 50 and 60 per cent and the ventilation allowed by the manufacturer should not be reduced. One moisture pad for each hundred eggs is usually sufficient and these may be used during the entire hatching period.

MAINTAIN QUALITY OF CANADIAN SEED

Amendments to the regulations under the Seeds Act of Canada were made in 1936, providing for changes in standards of quality for seed crops (commonly called grade standards), for the revision of the weed seeds list, the size of seed samples and the importation regulation of seeds.

The general policy followed by the Seed Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture in respect to grade standards for different kinds of seeds of cereals, forage crops, and turf grasses is for the Advisory Board under the Seeds Act to review these standards annually in the late summer when the quantities and the qualities of the season's seed stocks are known, and to adjust the lower grades to meet the seed supply. It is the aim of the Seed Branch and the Board to keep the standards for the highest registered, certified, and commercial seed grades fairly constant from year to year.

As a further means for the protection of agriculture against the distribution of certain very injurious weed seeds among cultivated seeds, the classification of weed seeds has been revised to include a class of prohibited noxious weeds amongst which are dodder, fish bindweed when present in cereal grains, hoary cross, Johnson grass, leafy spurge, and Russian knapweed. None of these weeds are prevalent in Canada, although all, except Johnson grass, have been found growing in isolated areas, but their spread among cultivated seed is being combated through seed legislation by providing that none of the seeds of these prohibited noxious weeds will be allowed in any grade for any kind of seed.

HEALTH

SUNLIGHT

Sunlight is an essential factor in promoting health. The particular rays which have this health promoting effect are the ultraviolet rays. These are chemically active and produce vitamin D right in the body and thus prevent the development of rickets. These rays also produce tanning of the skin and the degree of tanning produced in this way is a good indication of the amount of beneficial effect which has been derived from the sunshine.

In temperate zones many factors tend to reduce the amount of these ultraviolet rays which reach us from the sun. Smoke and dust in the atmosphere cut off a large number of them. On this account they are greatly reduced in the winter-time and in the early morning and late afternoon when the sun is low in the sky and the rays consequently have to travel a great distance of our atmosphere. With these rays in mind, it is of the greatest importance to take full advantage of the sunshine during the comparatively short summer season when the ultraviolet rays are the strongest.

Bathers in particular receive great benefit from the health-giving rays of sunshine, and sun treatments should be given according to a definite plan. In the early spring there are many mild days when the baby's face and hands may be exposed to the direct rays of the sun between the hours of 11 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Later on, as the days get warmer, the arms, legs and finally the body may be exposed. The time of exposure should be gradually increased to 10 minutes to at least one hour twice a day. The duration of each sunbath should be carefully watched by the clock and increased by 3 to 5 minutes each time, so that the baby's skin does not get burned.

Babies as well as older children should have a good coat of tan by the time the days get cooler in the fall and this probably as much as any other factor will help them to withstand the colds, influenza and pneumonia which occur in the fall and winter months. Be sure your child gets a healthy coat of tan during the summer and they will have fewer infections during the winter.

Venus is better fitted to support human life, than any other planet except the earth. The Philippines will shortly have 1,000 postal money order offices; one for each municipality.

The World of Wheat

By H. G. L. Strunge.

Director, Research Department, Seale Grain Company, Ltd.

Europe is buying much more wheat than even the most optimistic expert forecasted at the start of the season.

On August 1st, 1936, Mr. Broomhall—one of the World's greatest authorities—estimated that for this crop year Europe would purchase 420 million bushels; the Orient and India, 120 million; and the rest of the world, making a total of 540 million. On December 30th Mr. Broomhall concluded that Europe would take 28 million bushels more than he at first estimated, thus making a World total prospective demand of 568 million bushels.

For the past three months the rate of European purchases has exceeded even Mr. Broomhall's higher estimate and it looks as though the World total imports may finally be nearer 600 million bushels than 568. It is these unknown for additional purchases by Europe, of probably 60 million bushels, that have mainly been the cause of price rising at Winnipeg from $1.07, last August, to $1.48 today (for the World supply position has changed but little).

While 60 million extra bushels of wheat is not a large percentage of 540 million, yet 60 million additional demand, when World supplies are definitely none too plentiful, is a most important matter, and has had a great effect in raising price. Following factors have tended to raise price—Strong demand for wheat by Europe continues—Unfavorable crop reports from some European countries—Second official Argentine estimates of wheat, oats, barley, rye and flax lower than preliminary estimates—Greece purchases wheat from Hungary and Czechoslovakia—U.S. active buyer of Argentine corn—Flood destroy many crops in French West Africa.

Following factors have tended to lower price—Persia exports wheat to Germany—U.S. Pacific Coast exports wheat to Europe—Germany desires full Government control over all farm operations—Land preparations commence with moisture conditions favourable in Southern Hemisphere—Preliminary estimates U.S. A. winter wheat crop 653 million bushels.

Even the name sounds lovely and ideal for your kitchen as well—blue doesn't it? We can't think of anything that makes a room look cooler than soft clear blue cloth window shades. The color itself (it's absolutely new) is soothing to the eyes, besides keeping out the glare of the hot summer sun.

Just imagine how charming Larkspur Blue will look in a living room with curtains of white, ecru, yellow or blue. They'll be particularly splendid for your bedrooms to keep light and heat from your face and your children's eyes. In fact, we can't see why they wouldn't be ideal for your kitchen as well—blue doesn't it? We can't think of anything that makes a room look cooler than soft clear blue cloth window shades. The color itself (it's absolutely new) is soothing to the eyes, besides keeping out the glare of the hot summer sun.

★ Sensational News

Dwellers in our rural districts sometimes wonder how law abiding citizens dare to venture forth into the streets of New York or Chicago. If a resident of either of these great cities were to visit the Southern mountains and tell folks there he had never seen a gangster or witness a street murder he probably would be set down as an incorrigible liar. Similarly some of us city dwellers think of the Mountain folk only in terms of moonshine whiskey and feuds.

I happen to have lived in the southern mountains for a while and some of the feuds were my friends, quiet, modest, rather diffident old fellows, they prided themselves on their family virtues, and one and all were devout members of the Handsell Baptist Church.

When we were in the Orient two years ago there was a strike of the taxicab drivers in "big" home town, New York. Reading the dispatches in the English newspapers of the Far East led us to believe that 5th Avenue was knee deep in blood. When we got home we found that most of our friends hardly knew that a strike existed; their worry was not about themselves but about us, exposed to the awful dangers of Hongkong and Shanghai.

★ Insurance Security

When I was fifteen years old my father took me into his study and gave me a talk about life insurance. He was a preacher, with a large family and a small salary.

"Paying my premiums has kept me poor, and often in debt," he said, "but I am well rewarded. I can lie down and sleep soundly at night."

In order to bring the lesson home, he applied for $3,000 of life insurance on the twenty payment plan for me, saying that he would carry it until I graduated from college and I could go on from there.

Twenty years seemed longer at that time than a hundred years seem now. I wondered if I would ever live to the ripe old age of thirty-five when the policies would be paid in full.

Well, I have lived that long, and these policies, and some others, are all paid up. Father himself lived long and, having educated his children and seen them all married, he cashed in his insurance and was comfortable in his old age.

Remembering this lesson, I have signed my checks for premiums very cheerfully, but never with so much satisfaction as during the past few years. Nothing has happened to any of the big insurance companies, and nothing will.

APRIL—

SPRING

Signs of Spring! The signs of Spring are legion but never any mention of a sign of summer, fall or winter. Why does one watch for and believe in signs of the advent of Spring, unless it is because no other season is so welcome and no other sign so easy to believe? One believes in the signs one wishes to come true.

John Burroughs observed that Spring extends from the middle of March to the middle of June, counting to a close only with the unfolding of the last leaf. But April is the very heart and soul of Spring. It is as the month of Spring that the poet sings of April:

And now comes April, mingling smiles and tears,
Each hour a shower, each hour a zenith clear
Her blended hope and sympathy so vast
Smiles for the future, weeping for the past.

April was the month of wonders and immeasurable joy for those immortal naturalists Thoreau, Whitman, Burroughs, and Wordsworth. The signs of Spring they observed during this month of thirty days were not more fitful of guesswork prophecy. They knew the secret of nature and that Spring is her busy season and April her housecleaning month.

WHY TOWNS

STAGNATE

The town that does not have the support of its citizens cannot develop. writes the editor of the McGregor Herald. He says:

As a corporation a town exists to better the condition of its inhabitants; to make life more pleasant for them. Its business is to improve itself, better its facilities, to increase its attractiveness, and to protect its citizens and their property. The success of a town in its endeavors towards these ends depends on the efforts of its citizens. It is their ingenuity to use the same effort for the public good as they do in their private interests. The good citizen will try to keep his town moving ahead. Organized effort can bring about practically any conditions it sets out to develop if the effort is backed up by the organized determination, by the combined persistence of loyal and public spirited workers. A town is climbing up to the ideal, or sliding down into the rut, according as it possesses or lacks organized community spirit. The town that does not have the support of its citizens cannot develop. Let us remember that our private interest and our highest duty lies in the same direction, and each add our weight to the forces which are working in the public welfare.

BEGIN

Dream not too much of what you'll do tomorrow.
How well you'll work perhaps another year;
Tomorrow's chance you do not need to borrow—
Today is here.
Boast not too much of mountains you will master,
The while you linger in the vale below;
To dream is well, but plodding brings us faster
To where we go.
Talk not too much about a new endeavor
You mean to make a little later on;
Who takes now will ride on forever
Till life is gone.
Swear not some day to break some habit's fetter
When this old year is dead and passed away;
If you have need of living, wiser, better,
Begin today!

an National Railways with a view of obtaining a refund of amounts thus paid as soon as possible.
An account for $18.00 from the Royal Alexandra hospital for the hospital treatment of Mr. Harry B. Knox was filed on motion by Coun. Cork.

Notice was received from the Old Age Pension Department of the application of Mr. William Glass for Old Age Pension and on motion by Coun. Cork, approval of council was granted for a trial pension.

The Department of the Attorney General wrote relative to the account of the Central Alberta Sanatorium for $202 for maintenance of Pon Yee and, on motion by Coun. Welch, the Secretary was instructed to reply thereto, stating that Pon Yee was a transient Chinaman and that evidence of liability was hard to obtain and difficult to refute and that even if our liability is established legally, morally, we feel it an injustice to our taxpayers and that our Mayor will discuss the matter with the department upon his next visit to Edmonton.

On motion by Coun. Link, it was resolved that, if the public meeting decided to hold a Coronation celebration in Wainwright, committees be formed and the scheme financed by popular public subscription.
On motion by Coun. Welch the account from the Wainwright municipal hospital for $3.75 for their charge for X-ray on the hand of Norman Abernethy be authorized.The Finance committee reported, recommending payment of accounts in a total of $1830.50 as follows:

On motion by Coun. Cork, the report of the Finance committee was received and accepted and incorporated in the proceedings of this meeting and the Mayor and Secretary-Treasurer were authorized and instructed to issue cheques in payment of all accounts, included in the report, in a total of $1830.50.

On motion by Councillor Robinson the Secretary-Treasurer was authorized to order a new blade for the street maintainer.
The Fire, Light and Utilities committee reported as follows: That the schools have a complete inspection re fire hazards. Several hazards were taken up with the school boards, that have been put right, and made safe. A very complete test of all gas pipes, and appliances was made by a competent man, and the results of the tests are as follows:Public School: Gas was leaking from a joint in the pipe leading to the gas meter, all pipes from the gas meter to appliances are sound and in good order.
High School: Gas was leaking from the pipes between the meter and appliances, amounting to 4 cubic feet per hour. Pipe leading to the meter is sound and in good order.Small Brick School: All pipes in good order.
Separate School: Gas was leaking from the pipes between the meter and appliances, amounting to 3 1/2 cubic feet per hour. The pipe leading to the meter is buried in the ground, therefore could not be inspected.

The sewerage system, has been tested, and all pipes and appliances are now in good order, but a dangerous condition still exists in the fact that the pipes to the Separate school and high school are laid in excavations under the classrooms. We would recommend that the school boards be notified of this dangerous condition, with the view of having the pipes laid in a more accessible position.

On motion by Coun. Linkmore, the report of the Committee on Fire, Light and Utilities was received and accepted and authorized given for the carrying out of the recommendations included in the report.

The Committee on Property and Assessment reported as follows: That we recommend that the Town Secretary immediately notify all tenants of property belonging to the town, that they must pay at the Secretary's office the monthly rent (amount to be set by town assessor), promptly on the first day of each month, and the payment of rents will in future be strictly enforced. Also, that tenants in every property which are over two years in arrears, be notified by Town Secretary, that the rents must be paid to the secretary at his office, same to be recorded as per statutes governing same.

AMONG THE OLD-TIMERS

"REMINISCENCES OF OTHER DAYS"

TEN YEARS AGO

Once again the Wainwright Cadet Corps have been successful in winning the Strathcona Trust silver cup against all other schools in the province, their standing being 38.4 per cent. This is the second year in succession that these boys have won the cup and they are to be greatly complimented on their skill. The firing was done in a prone position of a twenty-yard range.

Mrs. A. Pettit has moved to town from California and is living in the building opposite the Star office.

The Women's Specialty Shoppe celebrated its 5th birthday on Friday last and entertained its customers to birthday cake and tea.

Despite the cold and backward Spring, cars are now getting in to town from several points in the country, although most of the roads off the main highway are still impassable for autos.

Mr. W. Gano is the proud owner of a new Chevrolet coach.

Mr. J. Ambo has had his hand very badly smashed last week when he was working with the well-drilling outfit.

SYDENHAM

Mrs. G. Alexander returned to her home in Ryley on Sunday.

The members of the best ring have been busy this week erecting a building on the farm of Mr. E. Smith.

Miss Romo of Chicago, who has been visiting at the home of her father, returned on Wednesday accompanied by her sister Miss Ida Romo, who intends to spend a couple of months on a vacation.

Mrs. Harkness spent the week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Baker, visiting at their home.

Mrs. Church, sr., is a patient at the Wainwright hospital. We wish her better.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Brassard entertained at their home on Friday evening when a shower was held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. F. Plust. A good crowd of neighbors were in attendance and the evening being played during the evening. Prizes were awarded to Mr. and Mrs. O. Croteau, Mrs. J. McLennan and Mr. F. Plust, after which a delicious supper was served, when a silver tea set was presented to Mr. F. Plust and a smoker's set to Mr. F. Plust, both the recipients expressing their thanks in a few well-chosen words. The party broke up at a late hour, after an enjoyable evening was spent. The best wishes of the community are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Plust for health and happiness.

Mrs. J. Baker entertained at her home on Saturday when little Joe McDonald entertained some of his friends, the occasion being his birthday.

News that Italy has devised a process of making wool out of sawdust must make the cows feel rather sheepish.

ASPEN

Miss E. Watson and Jack stayed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. Krinbill until they made arrangements for the erection of a new house. We are sorry that their home was destroyed by fire a short time ago.

Mrs. B. Warnock spent a few days in Edmonton visiting with friends last week.

The Aspen orchestra journeyed to Rosedale to play for a dance there after the Edgerton concert.

Misses Elsie and Lillian Haywood and Mr. Bob Haywood of Greenshields visited at the home of Mrs. J. Elwood and Mrs. F. Krinbill.

Mrs. Myers and family visited at the home of Mrs. P. Wilhelm last week.

Mrs. R. Hore and family are visiting at the home of her mother. The latter plans to journey soon to Ontario, where her husband has obtained work.

Mr. R. Semling and Louie and Kenneth spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. W. Krinbill.

The Aspen Athletic Club held a meeting in the schoolhouse on April 7th. It was fairly well attended.

We understand that Mr. E. Challenger is our new Councillor.

This week will probably see nearly all the farmers of this district begin work on the land.

Miss Daniels spent the week-end with her parents at Greenshields.

The "elephant" show is one of the smallest animals known to mankind.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

News from the battlefield this week shows that the Wainwright boys are figuring prominently in the doing over there, that is if the list of casualties means anything. Among those reported to be wounded and receiving medical attention in hospitals are: Messrs. Neil Livingstone, Martin Hedlund, Ernie Davey, F. Dahlgren and Bud Cotton.

Miss Mae Hood has been hired as teacher for the ensuing term or the Mayfield school. She has made her home with Mrs. J. Church.

Bob Simmesman had his thumb nearly cut off last week when he was working with a large axe.

Mr. O. E. Peterson, who was G.T.P. conductor here for many years, left this week with his wife and family for Edmonton where they will make their future home.

Mr. Sheridan of the Mayfield display has improved his home by the addition of a fine verandah.

Miss Cora Kemp began her duties in the J. L. Gerow drug store where she has accepted a position.

GREENSHIELDS

Miss L. Haywood returned to Camrose on Monday.

Miss Marion Haynes and Mr. L. Haynes attended the closing dance of the Vermilion Agricultural School on Wednesday last.

Mrs. C. Morrisette, Mrs. A. Plater, Mrs. H. Jackson and Miss Elsie Haywood motored to Edmonton on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Carl and family spent Sunday with relatives at Loughheed.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Harrington spent the week-end with relatives at Clyde. Betty Jean Goodale spent the week-end with Jean Hutchison.

Congratulations to Mr. Ivan Jackson who won the Wheat Board scholarship of one hundred dollars to the University of Alberta and also the prize for general proficiency.

Miss Doris Daniels spent the week-end with her parents.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid will be held at the home of Mrs. George Hols on Wednesday, April 14th.

Mr. Vic Saunders of St. Paul is again in the district at Mr. Walter Jackson's.

Canadian Garden Service

Canadian gardeners, particularly the newer ones are inclined to be temperamental. Those of long experience warn against planting too early, too deep and too close together.

As a matter of fact the average amateur starts operations days or sometimes weeks too soon and stops long before satisfactory operations can be continued. This caution against premature work, of course, refers to general planting covering annual flowers and vegetables. It does not apply to such things as shrubbery, perennial plants, climbers, trees and other nursery stock. These should be either planted temporarily or permanently just as soon as they arrive. Neither does the advice to go slow apply to such early things as sweet and garden peas, hardy spinach, lettuce, radish and grass seed. Just as soon as the soil will work up without any mud developing one is advised to attend to the extra early work specified. But with the average run of vegetables and flowers, there is no advantage in getting things in while there is still danger of serious frost. One set-back from a cold day or two completely offsets the early start and may indeed mean replanting the whole garden.

Not Too Deep

The second mistake of too deep planting is also a common one. Authorities recommend as a general rule only planting to a depth of three times the diameter of the seed. This means that seeds like peas and beans will be covered with about an inch of soil, but tiny things such as lettuce and poppies will be merely pressed in. With dahlias, gladioli and other big bulbs three to six inches, depending upon the kind of a soil, is advisable. Usually planting it is better to plant a little deeper in fine, light soil than in clay.

Not Too Close

Spacing is important and yet even the enthusiast does not care to spend much time kneeling and thinning. Labor can be saved by properly spacing the seed as planted. Corn, beets, peas and similar plants with big seeds can easily be sown at the distances advocated on the packet. With tiny seeded lettuce or alyssum however it is practically impossible to space by hand but if the seed is first mixed with a little dry sand and then the whole mixture sown thinly the job will be simple. After the plants come up, the gardener is advised to go over the beds and rows and thin out so that each plant will have space in between equal to half of its mature height. It is best to wait for a few weeks, of course, before the last thinning to make sure that cut worms, frost or other hazards are not going to do some thinning on their own account. With vegetables grown in fairly wide rows, it is possible to grow a little closer together in the rows than the general rule mentioned specifies.

Group Planting

In informal gardens clump or groups rather than specimen planting is usually best. This means that at least three and possibly a dozen or more of the same annuals or perennials are arranged together. This will give a more solid array of bloom and blending. The average garden should be a complete picture with grass, small and tall flowers, shrubbery and trees all blending into one complete picture rather than a display of individual specimens. Clump planting led, lends itself to such a picture particularly if care is taken to have different types and varieties arranged fairly close together so that bloom will spread over the whole summer.

Specialists often concentrate on one or two flowers. They may perhaps have a magnificent display of iris, or phlox or delphiniums and then cease to become interesting. But the general effect is not nearly as pleasing as a garden where one will always find flowers from early spring until fall and where these have been arranged so cleverly that dying foliage of the very early tulips and iris for instance will be hidden by later blooming perennials or annuals.

Not Too Late

It is not too late in most parts of Canada to order and plant perennial flowers and even shrubs and vines. Often towards the end of the season prices are lower and while the selection is not as wide as earlier, there will still be a good choice.

HOPE VALLEY

Little Baby Bowyer arrived home from Wainwright a few days ago. We extend a very warm welcome to this new resident and extend congratulations to Marie and Albert.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Roy left for their new home in the Peace River country on Saturday, April 3rd.

Ben Sewell left for Grande Prairie on Wednesday of last week, where he has secured a position. We wish Ben every success.

After spending the winter in Edmonton, Frank Shaban has returned home.

A good-sized kitchen is being built on the north end of Giles school. Mr. Alf Cheesterman having charge of this work. This will be a great convenience to the teacher and pupils and a benefit to the district at large.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Tomak gave a very enjoyable bridge party on Friday to a number of their friends.

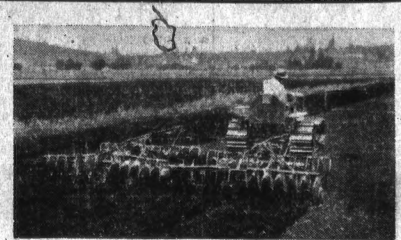

Instead of playing what promised to be a very exciting game of hockey with the Sligo boys, our local enthusiasts began limbering up their arms for the baseball season.

LOCAL BOY

AWARDED SCHOLARSHIP

Congratulations are the order of the day to Mr. Ivan Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jackson of Greenshields, who upon his graduation from the Vermilion School of Agriculture on Wednesday last, was awarded a scholarship of one hundred dollars to the University of Alberta, this prize being donated by the Wheat Board.

He also won the general proficiency prize, which was a handsome fitted dressing case.

A BAFILING MYSTERY THAT BEGAN BEHIND A COUNTER

Nikolas Noleuse, a departmental silk manager at Oxtons, a big London silk emporium, is discovered by Phyllis Varley, first assistant in the Chinese Silk Department, lying dead, his body wrapped in a roll of Chinese silk beneath her counter.

Superintendent James Beck, of Scotland Yard, finds that Noleuse has been strangled and later discovers that the man has been particularly interested in Suchow silk.

Professor Karmen, at the British Museum, tells Beck that he had met the man in China, where he found him inquiring the whereabouts of Tao Li, a silk weaver of Suchow. The professor tells the Superintendent that it is believed that Tao Li has been tortured and since dead because he knew the secret of the whereabouts of "The Five Eyes of Medichun," a jewel which has been pilaged from a temple in the mountains and which is sought by members of the Tong, a Chinese secret society. Beck forms the opinion that the weaver committed the crime to the silk he was weaving at the time he became aware that the Tong were on his heels.

Beck goes out that night to dine with Peter Oxtan, managing director of the silk store, and after he has left Oxtan returns to find a note pinned to his door. It reads: "Tartar who threatens evil to his daughter unless he instructs the police to cease their vigil at the store."

(Now Read On)

CHAPTER XII

OUTBURST

Phyllis Varley had felt moderately excited since the moment she had looked up from the counter and gazed into those inscrutable almond eyes.

Giving evidence before the Coroner that morning had not been in the least dramatic. Little more than a formality, while the presence of Superintendent Beck had more than reassured her. She had grown to like the Superintendent. When he had first interviewed her she had not been so sure about it. He had given her the impression that while he was asking her questions immemorable, all the time he knew the right answers.

She had, too, pondered over the mystery surrounding Noleuse's death, and how the police had been intensified by the fact that Phyllis Varley had revealed himself as a shrewd and quite clever thinker. It was odd, she thought, how she had so swiftly been drawn to Phyllis in the past, forty-eight hours, and she speculated whether the relationship would have been quite so intense as it now was if Noleuse had not died.

The man's death had perplexed her because her mind was not accustomed to mystery with its plot and counterplot. Had she, like Phyllis, been a student of crime fiction, she might have found in the details of the affair in which she was involved, something akin to the ingenuity of the fiction writers, but Phyllis, while reading in more romantic quarters, she liked to be amused, and what Phyllis she fancied were of a quite different order.

Yet she felt that she ought to help Phyllis if she could, even if she could not quite understand the vagourings of the other girls at the store who seemed to regard her in the light of a distinguished person, merely because she had been so lucky enough to discover a corpse under the counter. Phyllis could talk of little else whenever they met, and while their little jaunt in the West End two nights ago had been exciting and thrilling in its way it had been difficult to divert the young man's mind from criminal speculation.

Oddly enough since the visit of the Chinaman to the store business had been unusually brisk and she had been kept busy right up to the time the store closed at half past six.

Philip had said he would call around for her at eight o'clock, so that they could have a further discussion, and while Phyllis would much preferred to have been taken to the cinema she felt that perhaps Philip did well in what he had been asked to do by the Superintendent at Scotland Yard. Mr. Oxtan might be inclined to see that his promotion in Oxtons was rather more rapid than it might otherwise have been.

In the staff-room the other girls were still talking about the murder. Several of them had noticed the incident of the Chinaman that afternoon and pressed Phyllis for details which she gave readily enough.

"I think you should have told him yourself," piped up one of the girls, "but you must remember that there was the width of the counter between us. But I didn't know you were interested, Muriel."

"I'd give anything to lay hands on the person who killed Mr. Noleuse," she told them, and the hint of venom in her voice was almost startling.

A sudden silence fell on the room where the girls were changing into their outdoor clothes and renovating their complexion.

"Never mind, you felt just what you should," Phyllis broke the silence, hardly knowing what to say.

Muriel Rich turned to her and there was a frown on her face. "Of course you wouldn't," she spat out the words like a tornado. "You thought he was interested in you, didn't you? Well, you're wrong, Phyllis Varley. It was me he preferred. We'd arranged to go out tonight and now..." her voice trailed away like a fade-out in a broadcast and Phyllis was surprised to see that the girls' brown eyes were wet.

"I hope you told the Superintendent about your friendship, Muriel. He might be interested."

"I told him nothing," Miss Rich said, "because I don't see what my private affairs have to do with the police. All I know is that I've lost a friend. I lost the only man who ever showed any interest in me. And for why?" Her voice rose on a hysterical crescendo. "Answer me that! Why did he die? You don't know. Then I'll tell you. He was killed because he knew something. He was sure of it. And they had him down, just as the cruel dogs hunt down the defenceless fox and the stag. He hadn't a chance. He was just a friendless foreigner."

Miss Rich reached for her coat hanging from its accustomed peg. "When she had gone, the bubble of voices broke out afresh.

"Fancy Muriel!"

"Who'd have thought it!"

"I always said she was deep."

"You can never tell with those little 'moony' ones. They bottle things up."

So they went on discussing and commenting on Miss Rich's revelation.

THE BLACK CAR AGAIN

A little dark, Phyllis passed out into the dark October night. The wind had a "bite" in it and she decided rather than get the Tube to Sloane Square she would walk the distance.

It was particularly dark at the corner of Cadogan Gardens and Moore Street, seemed darker still as she turned into its straight length. So dark, in fact, that she scarcely saw the black saloon car standing silent at the curb until she was almost abreast of it.

Prom that moment subsequent events occurred so swiftly that afterwards when she had time to review the incident in detail it seemed almost incredible.

As she drew level with the rear of the car the door was flung hurriedly open and someone hurried himself upon her pushing out a hand against her face as he did so. The hand held something that felt white and she felt its dampness. She flung up her hands to ward it off but the suddenness and the unexpectedness of the attack prevented any form of defence. She gasped, which was just what she was intended to do. A sickly pungent aroma assailed her nostrils and the next moment while she felt herself being lifted bodily from her feet, she found herself slipping away into heavy oblivion which was oddly different from her lapse of consciousness in the shop. From that moment she remembered nothing of the journey in the black car. She did not even hear the soft purr of the engine as it was started up.

Sen Yat Bob seemed to be in a particularly good humour. Arrayed in his Oriental costume with the embroidered dragons upon it, he reclined with Eastern nonchalance on a richly carved divan.

Ling Poo must be congratulated on the speed at which he worked and Sen Yat Bob had not expected success in obtaining the indispensable Miss Varley at the first attempt. It would have been quite easy for him to have been neglected, but now that he had won another round in the campaign he began to feel that it had been worth while after all invoking the spirits of his ancestors.

Below in another room Phyllis Varley struggled lustily out of her oblivion. Her head burned and ached and her throat felt parched, her tongue rather too big for her mouth. It was an odd and altogether unpleasant sensation. And the worst of it was she couldn't remember what her happenings had been.

Slowly she opened her eyes, even though the lids felt as though they had weights on them. She found herself in a dimly-lighted room, but where the illumination came from she could not see. It appeared to be a room, from a point somewhere over in the corner. Then slowly and rather painfully, she began to place things together. Muriel Rich... her extraordinary outburst in the staff-room... the scalded comments of the other girls. She remembered perfectly the heat of the warm atmosphere of Oxtons, feeling the cool and welcome breath of the night against her cheeks. She had decided to walk back to Moore Street. Yes it was coming clearer now. She remembered the black saloon car... someone had been out... something had been pushed against her face...

"HIS EXCELLENCY'S" WISHES

With an effort Phyllis raised herself on one elbow. Her head swam; the room gyrated; the dim light seemed to dance about her. She was glad to lower herself into her original recumbent position.

Her hat had been removed, but otherwise she was dressed in her big coat with the deep fur collar just as she had left Oxtons. But strive as she might, she could not remember the reason for this outrage. She remembered having read about such things happening, but that it should have happened to her seemed beyond the bounds of possibility.

Then her memory reminded her of the Chinaman's visit to the store. It seemed a long way away now—like looking through the wrong end of a pair of binoculars although it could not have been longer than that afternoon, assuming, that was, that this was the same day, or rather night.

A sudden sense of nausea assailed her. It wasn't a physical nausea, but an emotional one. For the first time since she had made unwilling contact with the death of Nikolas Noleuse, she felt afraid.

Then she became aware that she was not alone in the car. A brilliant light she heard distinctly the soft padding of feet across the carpet. Or it might have been her head pounding against her ribs.

Her eyes a moment later told her it was not her heart she had heard, even though it was beating fast. It was standing beside the bed on which she lay. His features were in shadow, but by his stature she imagined he might be a Chinaman.

"You feel better, Miss Varley?" That voice, which she had heard it before? The vibrations of it quivered the strings of her memory. She remembered. That afternoon in the store. The Chinaman who had come to inquire about Suchow silk. So the Superintendent had been right. There was some mystery about that silk.

"Where am I?" she questioned him, and was surprised to find now distant her voice sounded. "What is the meaning of this outrage?"

"Please be calm, Miss Varley. You are quite safe. I come to see that you are all right—is that not so?"

What could she answer him? She felt far from being all right, as he put it.

"Let me go at once!" Phyllis demanded, raising herself quickly in an effort at what she believed might be one of escape from all this mystery.

"I am sorry, Miss Varley, but not yet. You are not yet well enough to make the journey. See, I have brought you something to drink," and the Chinaman held out towards her an ornate and curiously-fashioned beaker.

EMERGENCY SELF-HINTS

Stock your emergency shelf with bottled dietaries. Then, when company comes and catches you unprepared, you have an "actual" food exhibit to show them—from which they may choose the particular food that appeals. Chicken, tongue, shrimps, oysters, pickled mayonnaise, honey jelly and dozens of other colorful foods display their perfection perfectly through their glass containers. They look good and good they are in good condition. From these rows of appealing foods such dishes as the following may be prepared:

The girls' eyes regarded the glass and its contents with wild suspicion and she shook her head.

"Please take it away—I am not thirsty," she told him, her parched mouth giving an instant lie to her request.

"You will drink, Miss Varley!" The man's tone now was not a request—it was an order. "It may make you feel better."

She felt the cold rim of the beaker touch her burning lips as the man at her side held it. Then the liquid ran into her mouth and she allowed it to "slip unresisting" down her throat. She found it singularly pleasant, like onion juice flavoured with seductive spices. In a moment, she had taken the vessel from him and was eagerly gulping down the contents.

Phyllis felt like thanking him, but remembered her position, and remained silent, allowing him to remove the beaker.

"That is well," he chanted in a curious monotone. "In a moment I will come for you."

Silently as he had come, the man moved away, leaving her wondering whether this was a dream—a dream of stark unreality.

CHAPTER XIII

CHINESE QUESTIONS

Sen Yat Bob had no idea that an English girl could appear so beautiful in the light, and for a moment when Ling Poo observed the girl in his presence he just sat there staring at the manifestation of her pale beauty without speaking.

The fire of her hair, even under the subdued lighting of Sen Yat Bob's apartment, made her brilliant as the light of the life-like aspect of her face. Even the carnage of her lips was subservient to it.

"So you are Miss Varley," he said, at length, forming the words slowly and enunciating meticulously. "A ver-ee charming young lady. It was unfortunate that it should have been those beautiful eyes that first saw the dead form of a traitor. But won't you sit down, Miss Varley? You will find that cushion on the floor more comfortable than you might suppose. You may leave us awhile, Ling Poo."

Ling Poo withdrew, and Phyllis, her consciousness completely returned, glanced at the soft, gaily-colored cushion the Chinaman had indicated. She was telling herself that she must be careful not to divulge any secrets, either about the store or about herself. Her innate sense of self-mastery began to assert itself. She was determined that this complacent yet inscrutable man with the face that looked like a yellow mask was not going to fool her.

"I don't know that I want to sit down," she told him, and there was more than a hint of defiance in her voice as she flung the words across at him. "I'm much more interested in knowing the reason for this outrage, and I'll trouble you to allow me to leave this house at once."

Not a muscle of Sen Yat Bob's face moved; not so much as an eye flickered.

Hints for the Household

Conducted By Betty Barclay

Marinade

Lettuce, shredded celery, or shaved cabbage
Mayonnaise or other dressing
Marinate the shrimps and serve on lettuce, shredded celery or finely shaved cabbage and cover well with mayonnaise or other dressing.

Peasant Girl with a Veil

2 cups dried crumbs
1 cup tart jam
Whipped cream

This is a delicious Danish pudding. Crumble bits of graham or rye bread to make fine crumbs. Add a little sugar to the crumbs and heat them in slow oven until they are very dry. Cool and mix with any kind of jam, preferably a tart jam like apricot or plum. Mold, chill and serve with whipped cream.

WHILE RHUBARB REIGNS

Here are two new recipes to help you celebrate the return of the rhubarb season. The first is for a delicious conserve that will brighten spring breakfast menus. The second is for a novel punch that provides a delicious thirst quencher.

Rhubarb-Pineapple-Nut Conserve

2 cups canned Hawaiian pineapple juice
2 quarts diced pink rhubarb
unpeeled (about 3 pounds)

6 cups sugar
1 cup sliced Brazil nuts
Juice and grated rind of 1 large orange

Combine pineapple juice, diced rhubarb, juice and grated rind of orange and sugar, mix thoroughly. Bring fruit to a boil in a porcelain preserving kettle. Boil rapidly until thick, about 25 minutes. Be careful that mixture does not stick to bottom of kettle. Add nuts and seal in clean hot glasses. Makes ten 9-ounce glasses.

Rhubarb-Pineapple Punch

3 cups diced rhubarb
3 cups pineapple
1 cup sugar
1 cup canned Hawaiian pineapple juice

1 tablespoon lemon juice
1½ cups ginger ale

Crush the rhubarb, water and sugar until rhubarb is tender. Strain and cool. Add the pineapple juice and lemon juice, and just before serving add the crushed ice and ginger ale. 8 servings.

SPRING DESSERTS

Spring calls for lighter main-course dishes so we may as well excuse if we insist upon enjoying a dessert containing dates, raisins, or other food rich in calories. An eggless rennet-custard made without baking or boiling contains plenty of milk and makes a particularly desirable Spring dessert. Here are two timely recipes:

Date Rennet-Custard

1 rennet tablet
1 tablespoon cold water
1 pint milk
3 tablespoons sugar
20 dates

Maraschino cherries
Dissolve rennet tablet in 1 tablespoon cold water. Cut 16 dates in small pieces. Mix well with ½ cup slightly warm milk. Press through a strainer. Add strained dates and sugar to remaining 1½ cups milk. Warm to lukewarm—not hot. Remove from stove. Add dissolved tablet. Stir a few seconds and pour immediately into individual dessert glasses. Let set until firm—about 10 minutes. Then chill. Before serving, garnish with slices of dates and maraschino cherries arranged like a flower, using the dates for petals and the cherries for the center.

Bread Rennet-Custard

1 package vanilla rennet powder
1 pint milk
4 slices bread

Remove crusts from bread, butter lightly and cut in small cubes. Dip the cubed bread among 6 dessert dishes and add a few seeded raisins. Warm the milk to lukewarm—not hot. Remove from stove. Add rennet powder. Stir immediately and brisly until dissolved. Pour immediately over bread. Let set until firm—about 10 minutes. Then chill in refrigerator. Sprinkle with nutmeg before serving.

Individual Chicken Pies

Cook medium size chicken (8½ to 4 lbs.) until it falls off the bones. Add 1 teaspoon minced onion, to chicken while cooking. Shred chicken and add to stock which has been cooled down. If necessary thicken with a little flour as for creamed chicken.

For Crust (rich pie crust)

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder, sifted with flour
4 tablespoons shortening
½ cup cold water

Roll bottom crust and line patty pans. Fill with chicken mixture and put on top crust. Bake about 12 to 15 minutes in moderate oven.

Voting is not a good old American custom. Citizens of the Greek city states in the Roman Empire, and the German tribes voted long before our time.

A paste of finely ground soybeans can be used as a substitute for eggs in making salad dressing of the mayonnaise type.

WARNING!

FAILURE OR SUCCESS AT YOUR AUCTION

Which do you want?

The whole story of failure or success of an auction goes back to the advertising, for unless you invite people to attend your sale, you cannot expect a big crowd. And, unless the crowd is big and the bidding brisk, your livestock and machinery will sell at any old price, far below actual worth.

The Star will take the details of your sale to the farmers who really want to know what you are offering.

MODERN farmers depend on the newspaper for auction needs.

If you want a successful auction, advertise your sale in these columns, where it will reach the persons most interested in what you have to offer.

Make your invitation attractive. Make your sale seem worth attending. After all, you can't expect a big crowd at your sale unless you tell people about it. A farmer will travel fifty miles or more to get what he wants. Unless you list everything, you may leave out just what would bring a good bidder to your sale. The success of your auction depends on competition. A good bidder may mean hundreds of extra dollars at your sale.

This Week in Washington

Rising prices of consumer goods and the labor situation are the main worries of the Administration, and are regarded by many as constituting the "crisis" which President Roosevelt speaks of when he asked Congress to authorize him to make changes in the Supreme Court so that emergency legislation would be held to be Constitutional.

That prices are rising faster than the incomes of most Americans are rising is disclosed by official statistics of the Government, and that this process will continue so long as the Government continues to operate on borrowed money, is the gist of the warning sounded by Governor Marriner S. E. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board. Mr. Eccles' proposed remedy is to cut down Federal expenditures and impose new taxes, in order to balance the budget as soon as possible. This is not in accord with the ideas of some other members of the Cabinet, who do not want to have the expenditures of their departments curtailed.

On the other hand, Secretary Wallace of Agriculture has endorsed Mr. Eccles' views, and Secretary Roper of Commerce agrees, while Treasury Secretary Morgenthau is resisting as strongly as he can the demands of the spenders to be allowed to keep on spending.

Inflation Warning
The force of Mr. Eccles' warning has not been lost on the leaders in Congress, who have been warned many times from other sources that unless there is a firm check upon the present inflationary trend there is great danger of another collapse which might be as serious as that of 1929 and which, if it should occur before the election of 1940, would seriously affect the chances of the Democratic party continuing in power. But offsetting that in the minds of many leaders are considerations of immediate political concern. Spending money, particularly for relief, makes voters to stop spending it might lose enough votes in many districts to unseat Congressmen who will come up for re-election next year. Also, taxes are unpopular, unless they can be imposed only on wealthy individuals and corporations. That those who are now paying taxes in the "upper brackets" can pay enough more to bring the Federal outgo and income into balance is considered doubtful.

That means that any new income taxes must be spread downward, to reach the lower incomes, which would be politically risky, or must be in the form of excise taxes on commodities, which might be equally unpopular. However, Congressional economists and tax advisers are diligently studying the possibilities in both of those fields. There is talk of new excise taxes on coffee, tea, sugar—which seems quite certain, salt, steel and electrical appliances. Just at present both Senate and House spokesmen are saying that no new taxes will be necessary. That can be dismissed as the usual line of political talk heard every year at this period in the Congressional session. The practice has been and doubtless will be this year, to "hush-hush" on taxation until along in July or August, and then rush through a new tax bill.

Labor Policy Needed
Out of the labor situation precipitated by the "sit-down" strikes in the automobile industry has arisen a strong demand for the clarification of the Government's labor policy. There is, indeed, no definite labor policy on which all elements in the Administration are agreed. The major item of labor legislation, the Wagner Labor Relations Act, is still before the Supreme Court awaiting decision as to its constitutionality. That it is an inadequate tool is, in serious labor dispute is indicated by the fact that it has not been invoked in the automobile strikes. It places no power in the Government to intervene unless the organized workers are in a "industry call on the National Labor Relations Board for aid. Employers cannot, under the Wagner Act, take the initiative in calling for a decision as to the rights or wrongs of a dispute with their employees, and no power is lodged in any Government agency to compel workers to accept the Labor Board's decisions if they should be contrary to the worker's demands. Regardless of the constitutionality of the Wagner Act, there is a general consensus that an entirely different kind of labor legislation is needed. The Railway Labor Mediation law has worked admirably in maintaining excellent relations between railway workers and the roads, and under it the railway brotherhoods have not only maintained the respect and good will of the companies and the public, but have steadily bettered their own economic condition. Searchers for a Federal Labor policy to this mediation law as a good base to start from, while much study is being given to the British Labor Act, which places much more responsibility upon organized Labor than any statutes so far enacted in this country.

Privately a clear majority of Senators admit their opposition to the President's Supreme Court proposal; publicly not so many are willing to go on record. Seeding a basis of compromise, the proposal to authorize two additional Supreme Court justices seems likely to be acceptable to Congress, but whether it would be to the President, who has declared he will accept no compromise, is another question. It is possible that out of the agitation may come the submission to the states of one or more Constitutional amendments. More than twenty resolutions for amendments have been introduced in both houses. One which has long been discussed would limit the President to one term of six years. Others would limit the power of the Supreme Court to declare acts of Congress invalid, and several of the proposals undertake to broaden the grant of power to Congress to include many kinds of social legislation and to take from the states many of the powers now reserved to them.

Sand paintings used by the Najo Indians of New Mexico have interested Mrs. Franc J. Newcomb for some time. Recently more than fifty of her painted reproductions of these ceremonial rites were exhibited at Columbia University. Mrs. Newcomb is the wife of a trader in New Mexico. She has worked more than ten years on the sand painting reproductions, doing them entirely from memory as the original paintings are destroyed immediately after the Indian ceremony. Miss Gladys A. Reichard, professor of anthropology at Barnard College has written the text of a book on sand paintings of the Navajo, showing them with pictures by Mrs. Newcomb.

A marble bust of Susan B. Anthony, long a leader in the political equality campaign, is familiar to visitors to the Capitol at Washington. The sculptor is Miss Adelaide Johnson who also made another bust for the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

One of the most prominent theatrical organizations in London is the People's National Theater for which Miss Nancy Price, well known English actress is responsible. Miss Price also edits a quarterly magazine which informs members of the theater's activities.

Gradually women are being recognized in various branches of finance, the latest news of this kind to come to our attention being the election of Miss Mary E. Curran as a member of the board of directors of the Boston Credit Men's Association. In its forty-one years the association has never before had a woman on the board.

"AND THE SEVENTH DAY"

I feel sure our editor will pardon me, if I seem at times a little old-fashioned; there are so many things, new theories now—and so much untried stuff advanced, that it is refreshing to go back to the old trundle-bed for a bit of old-fashioned comfort once in awhile.

Isn't the family doctor a sort of guardian in his community? I think so—a trusted mentor and friend. He, above all others must conduct God's laws as always right.

So, there's a seventh day for rest. It has been so for centuries. That assumes that we work six days. He set the example for us, in this matter of first importance. Well, how many of us observe the law—or follow the Divine example? How many of us pay the penalty which is sure, after many, flagrant violations?

I am afraid that the church, ambitious to succeed in a holy cause, approaches very close to transgression when it fills the Sabbath with exciting ceremonies. Sunday is the day of all days when I keep my eye on the clock to see that I shall not be late at any of my denomination's ordinances. I have somehow acquired the feeling that, if I am late, or neglectful of formal statutes on Sunday, I am not living up to my duty as a God-fearing man—a would-be setter of good example in my community. So Sunday has become almost a day of exacting requirement, with but little REST. I wonder if God wants it that way?

Of course, BUSINESS desecrates, gallops over, takes no notice of the Sabbath. It's the day when soft drink trade is best, and when grease and gasoline are most in demand. Even drug stores remain open on account of emergency (?) prescriptions! Would God have it so—I wonder?

BOX SOCIAL & DANCE

In the Masonic hall

FRIDAY, APRIL 16TH

Sponsored by the members of the
A.Y.F.A.

GENTS' 25¢

LADIES BRING BOX

Mrs. H. E. Thompson returned home last week after spending a few days with her mother at Wolf Creek.

Mr. E. Trowartha, who is employed in the Government offices in Edmonton was down for a few days visiting with relatives and friends.

Friday evening last, saw a happy crowd gathered at the Separate school auditorium to enjoy an evening's dancing to the strains of the Springbett orchestra. The hall was tastefully decorated with streamers and balloons. The dance was sponsored by the high school pupils.

Few realize the terrible toll of lives and property taken by car accidents. The major business of any large garage is repairing cars wrecked in accidents, and upon inquiry, you would find that many of the drivers and occupants are in hospitals or morgues. Courts are busy all over the land settling disputes and assessing damages for car accidents which have maimed or killed some of the parties involved, and ruined financially the driver responsible. Speed and more speed makes an auto insurance policy a very necessary protection. For full particulars and rates see Joe Welch.

Mr. L. Good is now the proud owner of a new Plymouth car.

Mr. E. Michon was down from Edmonton over the week-end visiting at his parental home.

Half of the people who die and 60 per cent of those injured in accidents are motorists. High speed cars and slippery highways make it essential that full-protection policies should be carried by all car-owners. See Joe Welch or phone 57.

§ COMING EVENTS §

The ladies of Blessed Sacrament church announce a monster supper and dance in the Separate school auditorium on Saturday April 24th, commencing at 5.30 p.m. Admission 35 cents. Dancing from 9 p.m. to 12 p.m., music being supplied by the Springbett orchestra. Everybody welcome.

We are prepared to take care of all your Spring Requirements

The pupils of the public and high schools were visited by the inspector last week and "we believe they really enjoyed the visit!"

 If you are unable to pay a $10,000 accident claim you should see Joe Welch about insurance for your car. Every risk is covered and you have peace of mind when driving!

Mr. E. Smith, our local Imperial Oil agent, last week purchased a new car from the Brunner Service Station.

We are glad to note that Master Donald Mackenzie is now recovering nicely from the appendicitis operation he underwent last week.

Corporal J. Collette is now back from Regina and is once again in charge at the local R.C.M.P. barracks.

Mr. J. Bear is now seen driving his new wagon on his daily milk deliveries. It is, we believe, soon to bear the name "Edgemoor Dairy".

Mr. Geo. Boyd, who has been spending the winter with his family in Vancouver, returned to resume his farming duties last week.

Get your radio license immediately from Mr. A. Adams, the local radio inspector.
